Take the Union!

It has a far larger circulation than any other daily newspaper that has been published here for years.

It is the official newspaper of the United States for Tennessee.

It is the official newspaper of the State of Tennessee.

It gives the latest news from the Military Department South, and later than any other paper.

It has immediate communication with the Military Headquarters, which no other paper here has.

It gives reliable information.

An Experience in Border War.

In the mean time, let me run over the history of an afternoon on the outposts. When your readers stumble upon an account of picket fighting, they are apt to pass over the subject as too much a matter of course, and too insignificant to occupy a people whose thoughts are upon great strategy and onward movements. But to those who will listen I promise to show up an exhibition of a more cold-blooded and fiendish malice, and almost as much interest as a first class engagement. I write on a pile of boards, in the upper room of the white frame house which forms the rendezvous of our pickets, and commands a view of the long, irregular contour of timber which, at distances varying from a quarter of a mile to a mile, shuts in the scene, and of the faded and shadowy village of Farmington, of which I spoke in my last.

The crack of rifles in the neighboring forest reminds one of pigeon hunting in October. From the window forms can be seen stooping and skulking about the log cabin, half concealed in the verge of the time, which is evidently the headquarters of the enemy's pickets. You feel that you are at last in the bodily presence of the adversary, who has made for the last twelve months such a show in the headlines of the telegrams many hundred miles away. Right yonder, not three minutes walk from where you stand, these devils are this moment stalking from stump to stump, and tree to tree, or silently waiting in ambush till some chance exposure shall present a good mark. In the clump of trees just west of us, at a distance of four hundred yards, our own picket is engaged in a lively duello with some rascal hidden in the bushes in the neighborhood of the log cabin. The excitement of the search with a field-glass for a rebel picket, is somewhat similar, although on a greater scale, to the search of the hunter for his game. You scan every stump and bush—you explore every quiver of the air—the gleam of a bayonet—every movement of the foliage seems to betray a sharp shooter. You are conscious that those dark woods are full of eyes, that field glasses and perhaps muskets are directed at you. Now and then a "Minie" comes humming and hissing close enough to make one wince. A moment ago a spent ball made a sudden scattering among a knot of half a dozen cavalry men in the yard below.—St. Louis Democrat.

All Mail Tennessee.

Vital as are the triumphs in the field which are now crowning competent generalship, as important is the triumph that statesmanship is winning on the Tennessee field; and while our naval and military heroes there are scattering the secession forces, Andrew Johnson is reconstructing the civil government. We here, now and then, meet with the doubting question, "what are you going to do with the people after the work is done in the field?" and the practical reply is seen in Tennessee. Here men who are known to be true to the flag are gathering beneath its folds; and its representation has no such word as "subjugation" save only to traitors. For good citizens who mean to be loyal, the word is, resume the old local self-government of which the leaders have deprived you; resume the old property of which you have been robbed; and no worse state is there in the future than has been seen in the past. This gathering of the Union men by the Governor and thus fulfilling the national duty of a guaranty of a republican form of government to Tennessee, is as clearly in the line of the Constitution as the charlatan proposition of wiping out the States, as proposed by the ultras in Congress, is as clearly against it.

The progress of Gov. Johnson is proclaimed to be most satisfactory.—Boston Post.
